New Factory to be Started in Omaha,

The motion of the defendants in the case of Fish vs. the Nebraska City barb wire works to dissolve the injunction and dismiss the receiver appointed on the prayer of the plaintiff, has been denied by Judge Dandy. Mr. Fish is the owner of 49 per per cent of the capital of the corporation and accuses the majority shareholders of trying to freeze him out. One good result of the litigation is that it brought Mr. Fish to Omaha, and while here he became so impressed with the natural advantages of the city as a manu-turing centre that he has determined to locate here and build up an extensive barb wire factory. He has leased a large piece of ground on the bottoms between Leavenworth and Jones streets, and will at once commence the erection of a suitable building. SOUTH OMAHA.

The Advantage of Setting in the New Town

The title "South Omaha" does not mean the southern part of the city of Omaha, but is the name of the thriving town commencing at the Union Stock yards on the south, and extending for a mile and a half north, nearly connecting with the city limits of Omaha.

The company have again concluded to put on sale 1,000 lots, and let the purchasers of the same realize the profit which the enhanced value of these lots is sure to make. It now the same realize the profit which the enhanced value of these lots is sure to make. It now being an assured fact that South Omaha is destined—in the near future—to be the largest live stock market west of Chicago, there can be no doubt that this property in a few years will be worth five or even ten times the amount that it can be bought for to-day.

Some may ask: If this is so, why do not the company keep it and realize this profit. The answer is, that in order to make lots valuable, there must be improvements on or sur rounding them, and as is the case in all new towns, special inducements must be offered at first to get the people to take hold and build.

There are probably more such inducements offered by South Omaha, than were ever put forth by any new town. The large business done by the stock yards company and the immense slaughter and packing houses together with their auxilaries are no small feature in the aggregate of events that are destined to make South Omaha a large place. Again, the town is not an addition to Omaha, and is not liable for city taxes, although it enjoys all the benefits from the growth of Omaha that it would if it were just instoc the city limits, but being just is not an addition to Omaha, and is not liable for city taxes, although it enjoys all the benefits from the growth of Omaha that it would if it were just inside the city limits, but being just OUTSIDE, only county taxes are collected, which are merely nomical. The town owns and operates its own water works, which furnish an abundant supply of pure spring water. Dummy trains will rnn on the B. & M. and U. P. railways every hour, stopping at the north end of the town site as well as at the stock yards. The Thirteenth street horse cars will ran to Hascall's park this spring, and to the stock yards at no distant day. The high altitude makes the location a healthy one.

Of course there are those who do not believe that South Omaha will amount to much. This kind of people didn't believe Chicago would ever be anything better than a cranberry bog, that Omaha would ever outgrow her village clothes, that there never could be any fruit raised in Nebraska, etc., etc. Who made it win? The sceptics, or those that had an abiding faith in the energy, intelligence and resourses of this great country?
